It has been quite a run for Canadians here at the World Series of Poker in 2013. It started with Daniel Negreanu winning the Main Event at the inaugural WSOP Asia-Pacific in Melbourne, Australia in April. Heading into tonight's final table, six other Canadians also added WSOP gold bracelets to their resumes during the 44th Annual World Series of Poker.

The latest Canadian champion is another French-Canadian, Jason Duval. The 23-year-old student from Quebec triumphed in the latest $1,500 No Limit Hold'em event, winning the bracelet and $521,202. The victory is the first for Duval and the seventh for Canada this year, setting a record for the most bracelets won by the North American powerhouse in a single summer.
