Late last night, Teichert and Vincent Maglio were tangled in a heads-up battle that extended beyond the scheduled ten levels of Day 3 play in the $2,500 No Limit Hold'em event. When given the option to keep going, Teichert said he wanted to go home and come back fresh today. At the time, he held the chip lead over Maglio, but Maglio was picking up pots, cheered on by a supportive rail.
After a good night's sleep, Teichert and Maglio returned to the felt and , in a little less than an hour, Teichert managed to finish off his opponent, winning the bracelet as well as one of the biggest paydays of the summer, worth $730,736. Maglio collected an impressive $452,008 for his runner-up finish.
The win is the latest in the late rush of European players this summer trying to challenge the onslaught of North American winners that has been positively dominating this series.
