Dan Heimiller has been a fixture at the World Series of Poker for nearly 20 years. He's experienced all the ups and downs that go along with being a full-time professional poker player. To his credit, he's endured it all -- and always with professionalism and class. Actually, it's sometimes hard to tell if Heimiller is winning or losing when you see him. He always seems to have the same peaceful expression on his face.

That expression cracked a little tonight, as Heimiller managed to win the biggest prize of his long poker career. The Las Vegas pro collected $627,462 in prize money for this most recent victory. He also earned his second career bracelet after a first victory back in 2002 in a Seven-Card Stud event.
