Brandon Paster came to Las Vegas with a very specific plan. He was going to play three tournaments and he was going to Electric Daisy Carnival. Apparently, even winning a bracelet isn't going to stop that plan.

The 27-year-old currently residing in Amherst, Massachusetts defeated a tough final table that included a number of Circuit ring winners and the red hot Gabriel Nassif to take the top prize and the biggest score of his career, winning the $1,500 Pot Limit Omaha event for $264,400. He defeated bracelet winner Marcel Vonk heads-up for the title. Vonk collected $163,625 for the second place showing.
