Poker pro from Costa Rica books his biggest tournament win in Las Vegas

The turbo event wrapped up with Carlos Restrepo taking the title and his first career World Series of Poker Circuit ring. The poker pro from Costa Rica took home $12,454 for his biggest tournament win, bringing his total earnings to $50,000.

After getting heads up against Michael Holm, who has been heads up for a ring four times now, Restrepo had a sizeable lead. Holm chipped away and locked up a double early on in the match, but Restrepo eventually got the job done.

Restrepo was supported by an excited rail for the duration of the final table, and even got a series of happy chants in Spanish to celebrate the win.
